

Humanity Insured

Climate resilience starts with financial resilience

Who we are

We are Humanity Insured.

A new organisation, set up with the backing of the insurance market, which empowers communities to build climate resilience through financial resilience.

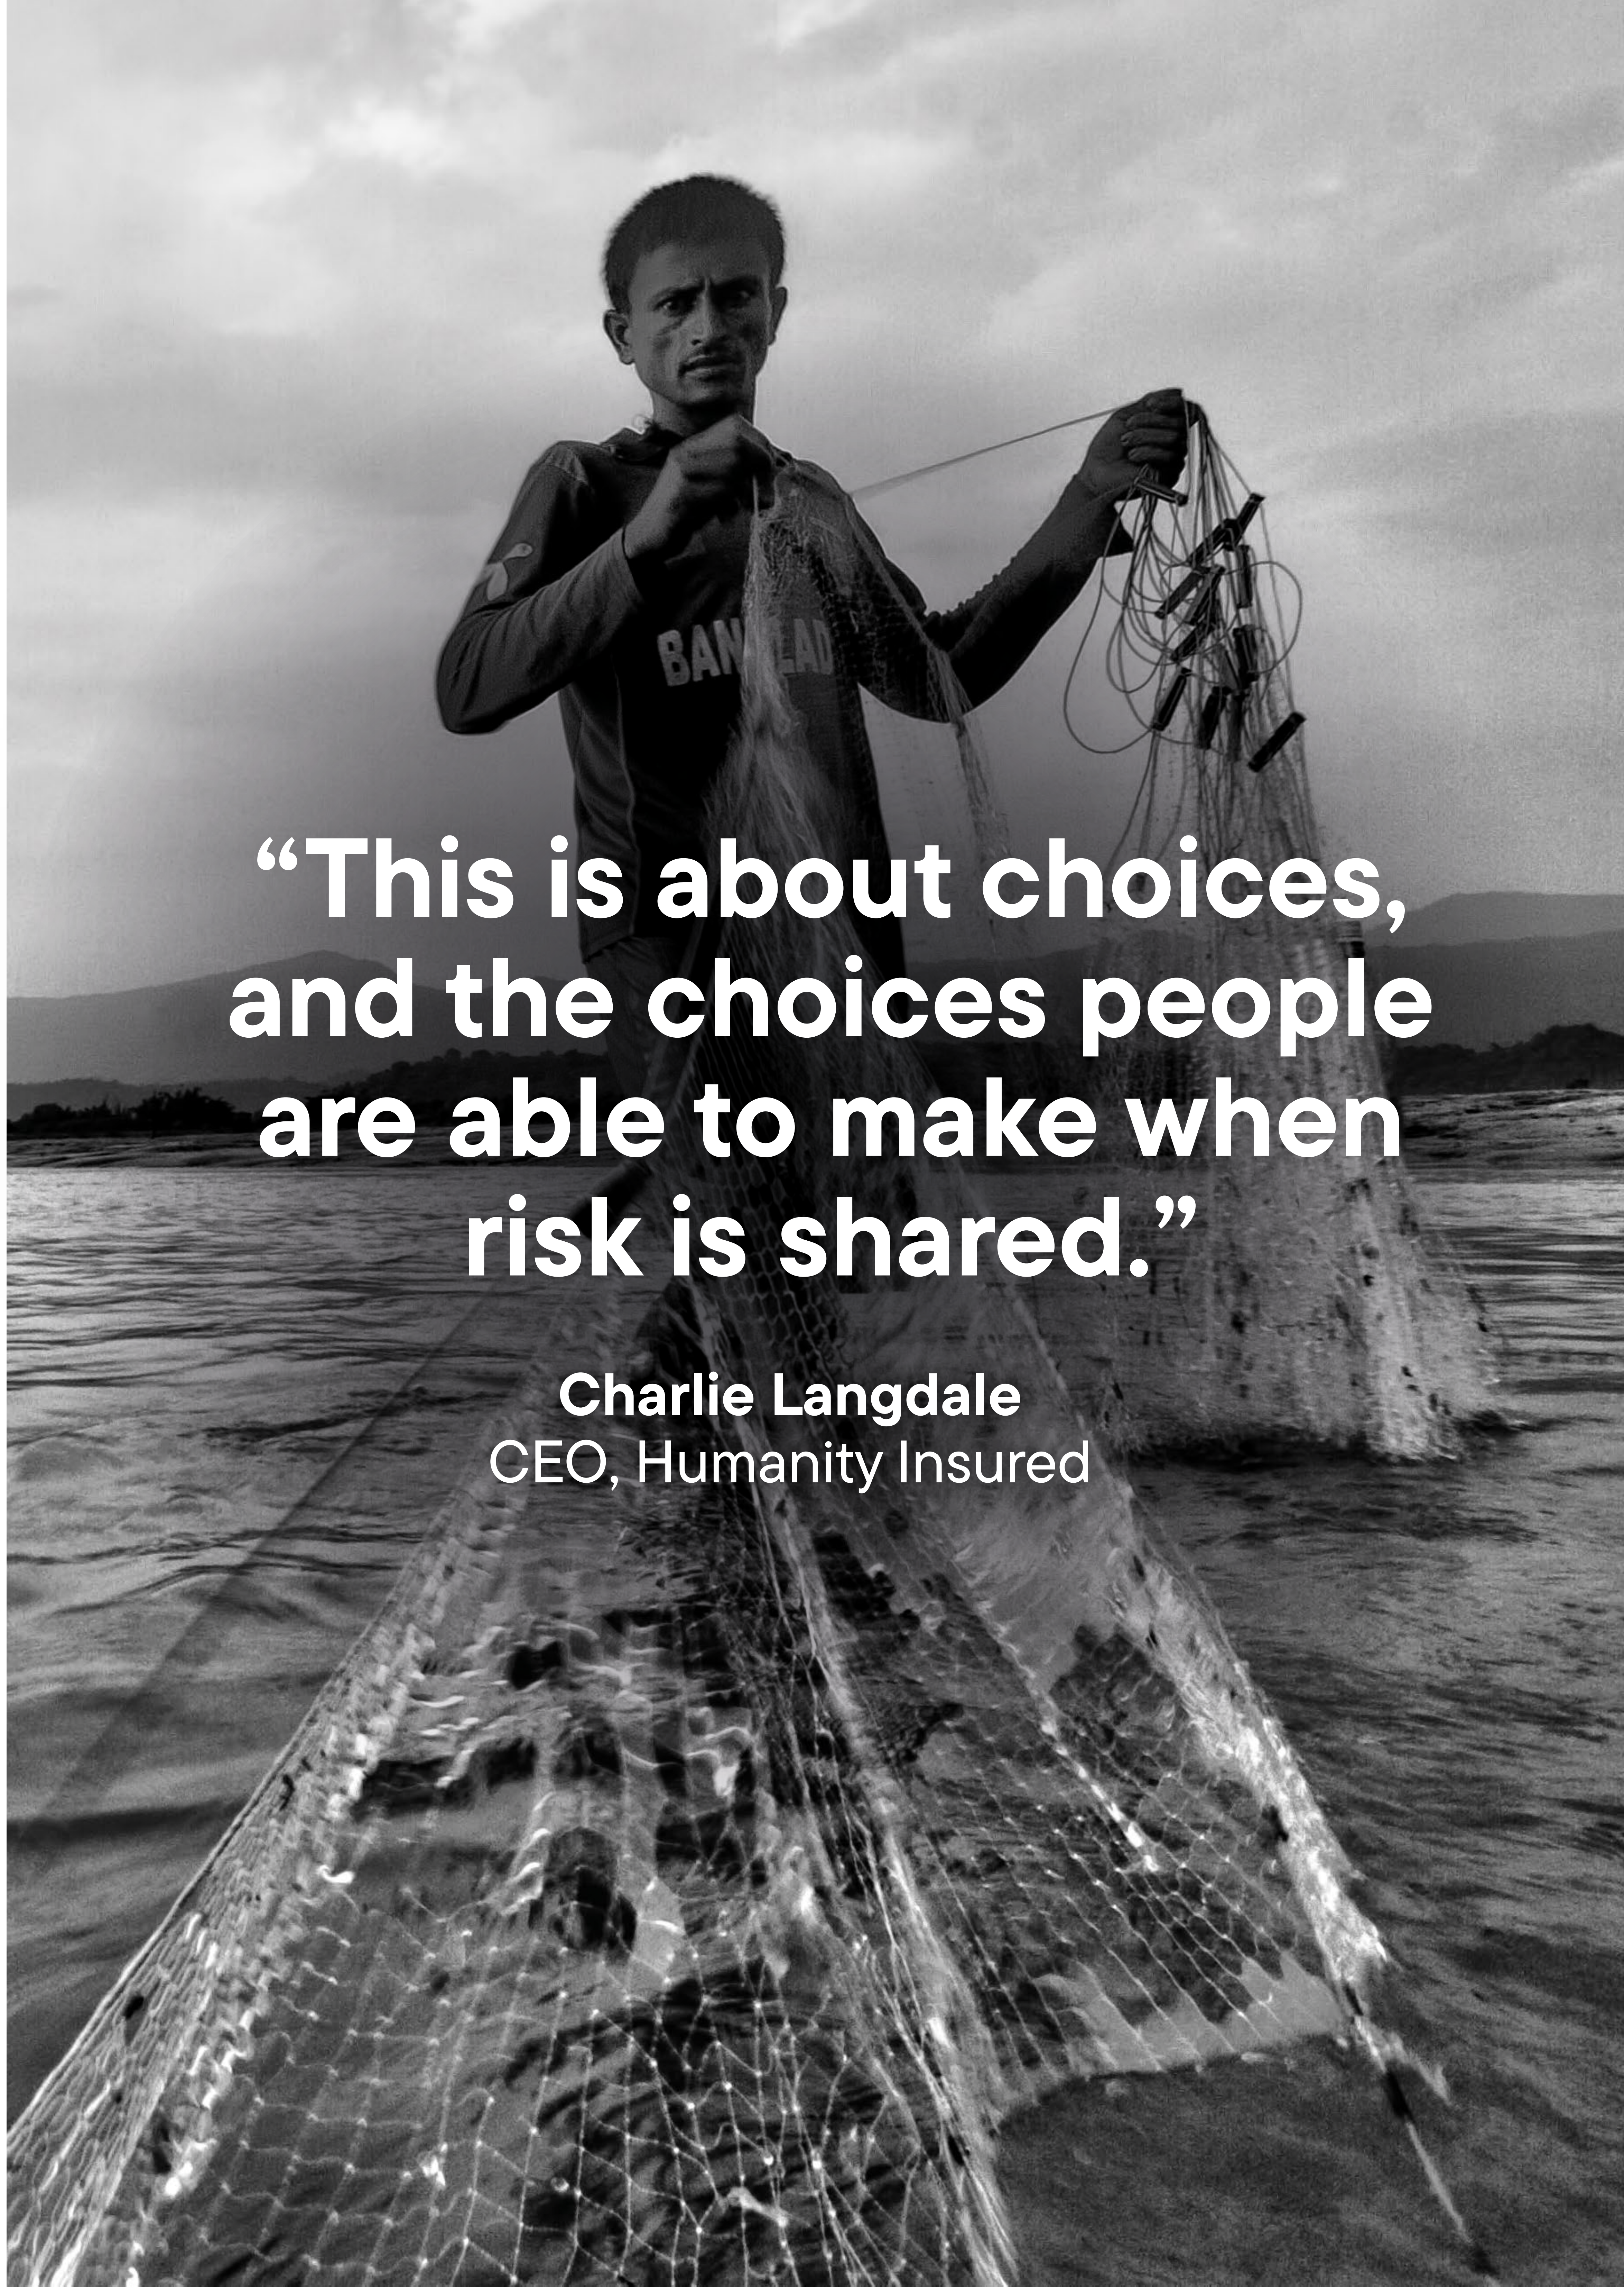

Shared risk unlocks shared possibility

What we do

We work with partners to transform the insurance system. We use private and philanthropic capital at scale to help communities on the climate crisis frontline access and pay for new forms of insurance.

By prioritising inclusion and affordability, insurance can work for these communities for the first time, and help people protect their futures.

“This is about choices, and the choices people are able to make when risk is shared.”

Charlie Langdale
CEO, Humanity Insured

Pre-emptive solutions unlock progress

How we do it

The burden of climate crisis risk falls unfairly on people in frontline communities, forcing many into survival mode. But when risk is shared, everything changes.

Insurance multiplies the impact and value of funds available for frontline communities. It provides financial security that can kickstart a virtuous cycle of investment and growth.

This is insurance for humanity

Our purpose

By providing financial protection through insurance, we prevent failed harvests from stealing childhoods. Sick livestock from becoming lost livelihoods. And disasters from descending into crises.

We help people invest in everything from education to new farming techniques. And unlock confidence, strength and empowerment across the world.
